

Saloon Held Up.

Four men, two medium sized, two rather tall, with handkerchiefs tied over their faces, entered Kitchen & Kennedy's saloon at Gallup, at 10:40 Tuesday night, with a brace of revolvers in the hands of each, and held up the entire house. The gambling tables and saloon cash drawer was relieved of about $500.

An attempt was made to force Peter Kitchen to open the safe, but he pretended that his partner, Kennedy, alone knew the combination.

After driving everybody from the street into the saloon, the desperadoes took all the valuables that each one had. A good-sized crowd was present in the saloon. Then they escaped by the back door, after firing off their pistols to scare off possible pursuit, and ran to a point near town where their horses was staked. Some of those robbed feel certain they recognized one of the robbers. They are now being tracked by Indian trailers.

Sheriff Hubbell was notified and a posse is now in pursuit of the robbers, who went south.

The town was wide awake at the time of the robbery. Professor Ford's dancing class was in progress in the hall over the saloon, and some of those in attendance, who had gone to the street during intermission, returned minus all their valuables. The town is considerably worked up over the occurrence.

Come, Phonecians Try It.

If the Grand Canyon railroad is completed before the summer is over there will be a large number of Phoenix people who heretofore have been spending the warm season on the coast, take advantage of the road to visit the canyon, to remain there until cool weather.

—Phoenix Herald.

The lack of a railroad to the Grand canyon need not keep our Phoenix cousins from spending the hot season, that sweeps over the capital city for several months every year, in Flagstaff and the mountains surrounding. From May to December the weather is delightful, and the climate is an ideal one. There are many fine camping places where hunting and fishing can be enjoyed. Let our southern neighbors try it at least one season, and avoid the heat of home as well as the heat of Southern California.

Prehistoric Relics.

Ben Doney has secured another lot of prehistoric relics. Among the articles are a number of fine specimens of earthen cooking and water vessels. Some of them are painted in the various designs and colors of the pottery found in all the old ruins. A couple of human skulls were also obtained from a grave. Mr. Doney has an interesting collection of relics and takes pride in showing them to persons interested in such things. The collection has been obtained in the old ruins 65 miles north-east of here. Mr. Doney is of the opinion that this prehistoric race were descendants from the Chinese.

The Southern Pacific Company have recently completed the laying of twenty miles of heavy steel rails near Lordsburg and Tucson, thus making 62 and 75-pound steel rails continuous from Tucson to El Paso, which, together with the strengthening and general improvement of the roadbed which has taken place in the past few months, makes this one of the best and safest pieces of track in the country. The Benson and Bowie yard are being doubled in capacity to meet the demands of the increasing business.—Star.
